Welcome

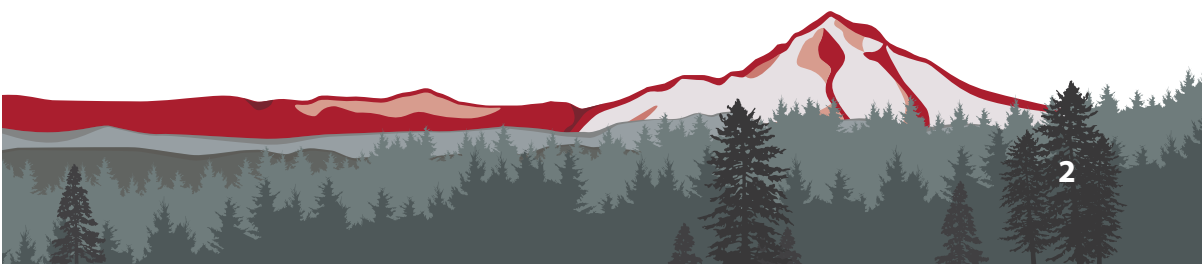

Dear Community Member,

As we wrap up the 2020 calendar year and look forward to beginning our 2021 Winter Term, we at Mt. Hood Community College are feeling a renewed sense of duty as an important resource and support system for our students and our community. Over the last year, we have watched our students overcome incredible challenges as they continue to work to become their dreams in this ongoing reality of remote learning. This has been inspiring to watch unfold and is the reason we keep striving to be there for our students as more than just a college, but as a trusted place they can turn to for help when they are struggling academically or otherwise.

As we learned about the challenges many of our students faced while they adapted to the virtual classroom, it became apparent that we needed to do more. We took steps early on to make all of the resources students would normally be able to access on campus available online, but it remained clear that this alone was still simply not enough. That is why we developed our Student Basic Needs Response Team right before the start of Fall Term. Dedicated to identifying and addressing student needs and connecting students with campus and community resources, this team is made up of stakeholders from across the college, including Instruction, Student Development, Administrative Services and District Communications. It is our hope that this team along with the rest of the college's support services can make this new reality of online learning one that is more accessible for all students in our community.

In the following pages, you will find the stories of several students who have adapted to learning remotely while overcoming various challenges. As you will see, this has been a journey for all of us, but all of our faculty and staff are unwavering in our commitment to being here for our students no matter what. It is our hope that these stories will inform and inspire community members of all ages and stages to take this time as an opportunity to learn, grow and reach out to us for support whenever we are needed.

Dr. Lisa Skari, MHCC President

Achieving Success in the Virtual Classroom

MHCC students speak about finding resources and excelling in the remote learning environment.

In mid-March of 2020, Mt. Hood Community College (MHCC) students, faculty and staff were just wrapping up Winter Term and looking ahead to spring.

But then the COVID-19 pandemic forced Oregon's colleges and universities to migrate courses to the virtual classroom in a matter of weeks.

Many students have a similar story to that of Nicole Johnson-Moses, who is a psychology major and first-time online learner. Nicole's advising appointment to sign up for her Spring Term classes was the last time she set foot on an MHCC campus.

"I'm a mom of two young girls, so I started attending Mt. Hood knowing

I wanted to find a career for myself," she said. "I was ready to go, and then everything hit and it all went online. It was a big mental adjustment for me."

That adjustment took some time, effort and patience, but according to Nicole, the support of her instructors and her partner have made all of the difference.

"I thought it was going to be a lot more complicated than going in person. As a parent, I was really nervous and that was my big concern, as well as making sure I was going to get the same quality education out of it," she said. "We have moments that are challenging, but for the most part it's been great."

Kenia Alabarran has never set foot on an MHCC campus. A Spanish-speaker,

Kenia began taking Intensive English for College and Career (IECC) in Spring 2020 and has found ample support from MHCC's AVID and Learning Success Center, which provides online tutoring services. This helped her overcome barriers to learning a new language remotely.

"Sometimes in-person you can use body language to clarify your thoughts or what you are trying to say. That is not always possible with a camera," she said. "The tutors have helped me a lot."

Kenia is now aiming to complete her IECC coursework by Winter Term so she can begin working toward an associate degree.

"Don't get frustrated. It can be easy to get frustrated and decide to quit, but it is good to remember that many people are in the same situation as you and that you are not alone," Kenia said. "Sometimes you think 'I'm not smart enough to take online classes' but everyone can do it. The key is to be persistent."

These students are diverse when it comes to their academic goals and backgrounds, but when it comes to online learning, they share the prior misconception that it was not something that they could do, that it was not for them. Now they are all finding success in the virtual classroom, as well as comfort and flexibility in being able to study from home.

“It can be easy to get frustrated and decide to quit, but it is good to remember that many people are in the same situation as you and that you are not alone. Sometimes you think ‘I’m not smart enough to take online classes’ but everyone can do it.”

– Kenia Alabarran, MHCC online student studying Intensive English for College and Career (IECC)

"I do miss being on-campus, but what has really surprised me is how accessible my online classes have been," Nicole said. "I know I can do my homework after my kids are in bed or I can get up earlier and get it out of the way. It has really made it so I have more built-in flexibility. I don't think I ever realized how well this could actually work."

Short-term Certificate Programs

Just because most programs are closed for in-person instruction doesn't mean today's students need to put their plans for a new career on hold. MHCC has options for short-term certificates in health professions and other valuable programs that only take two-to-six months to complete. These will be taught in a blended environment using online learning and strict physical distancing practices at our Gresham and Maywood Park campuses.
